Ultimate Layoff (short story)

It is surprising to find Geroulanos arguing that the war amounted to a rupture in French intellectual history given that his own previous work, which joined the dots between anti-foundational realism in the s and the emergence of structuralism in the s, was exemplary of a rising historiographical trend of trans-war periodisations in the study of twentieth-century France. Really enjoyed how much Mags has grown and continues to grow.
